

Recognized Railroad Lawyer Joins HunterMaclean

Business law firm HunterMaclean announced that Randall A. Jordan has recently joined the firm as a partner in the Litigation Practice Group.

Jordan's practice focuses mainly on business litigation pertaining to transportation and logistics. In a release, the firm said he has tried more than 100 jury cases in state and federal courts throughout the United States. Jordan has defended some of the country's largest railroads in a wide array of business and tort matters, including the defense of hundreds of asbestos and other toxic exposure claims. He also is a frequent speaker to groups across the country on issues facing the transportation and logistics industries.

"Randy is recognized throughout the southeastern United States for his invaluable knowledge and experience," said HunterMaclean managing partner Brad Harmon. "His addition to HunterMaclean will be an asset to our firm and clients."

He has been listed in The Best Lawyers in America® for the past seven years and recognized as a Super Lawyer within the State of Georgia. He is also AV Rated by Martindale-Hubbell.

Jordan received a Bachelor of Arts from Duke University and graduated from Mercer University Walter F. George School of Law. He is a member of the Brunswick Bar Association, the American Bar Association, the State Bar of Georgia, the National Association of Railroad Trial Counsel, and the Defense Research Institute.
