

Merger With Norton Rose Means No More Chadbourne & Parke

Above the Law reports that a 115-year-old Biglaw firm is no more, after Chadbourne & Parke announced that its anticipated merger with Norton Rose Fulbright is official.

Reporter Kathryn Rubino writes that the combined firm, which will operate under the Norton Rose Fulbright name, has about 1,000 lawyers in the U.S. , with roughly 300 of them in New York City alone.

She writes that there were concerns that client conflicts could delay the firms tying the knot, but the announcement of the merger puts those concerns firmly in the past.
