

Partners Forced Out As Biglaw Firm Considers Strategic Shift, It's Reportedly A 'Bloodbath Over There'

Above the Law reports that four partners in the London office of Ropes & Gray are being forced out following a strategic shift in the firm's direction.

Editor Kathryn Rubino quotes a report from Legal Week: "Multiple sources have told Legal Week that the quartet are set to leave following discussions with firmwide management, who travelled into London last week from the US.

"One former partner said of the exits: 'It seems like a bit of a bloodbath over there at the moment. It has for a long time. The last two years have been shaky.'"

Read the Above the Law article.