

University's General Counsel Suspended, Gets 30 Days in Jail for Court Behavior

Bowling Green State University's top lawyer was placed on leave Friday and will begin serving a 30-day jail sentence Monday after a Wood County judge found him to be in contempt of court while representing himself during his divorce hearings, according to The Toledo Blade.

The Blade's Allison Dunn explains:

Sean P. FitzGerald, 58, who is employed as the university's general counsel and vice president, was sentenced by visiting Judge Stephen Yarbrough following a series of misbehavior incidents while representing himself in the Wood County Common Pleas Court Domestic Relations Division in the divorce from his wife, Margaret A. FitzGerald.
