

7 Things to Look for When Reviewing a Contract

Chris Brown, founder of Kansas City law firm Venture Legal, offers seven quick factors to review in every contract to help you protect your interests.

In the article published on SiliconPrairieNews.com, he starts his discussion with the importance of properly naming the parties. “The first thing you need to do is make sure the parties are identified correctly. If you are a business, then make sure you are signing the contract on behalf of the business and not yourself individually.”

He continues the discussion with the issues of naming the parties, obligations, payment terms, termination rights, intellectual property, confidentiality, and miscellaneous terms.

Read the article.