

Apple Care Replacement Devices $95M Class Action Lawsuit Settlement

“Apple will pay $95 million to resolve an AppleCare lawsuit claiming it failed to replace broken devices as expected under warranty terms. The settlement benefits individuals who purchased AppleCare or AppleCare+ for an iPhone or iPad after July 20, 2012, and received a remanufactured replacement,” reports Top Class Actions in their blog.

“AppleCare is the tech giant’s extended warranty plan for devices such as iPhones or iPads. When Apple customers pay for this service, they are able to have their damaged devices repaired or replaced. However, according to an AppleCare class action lawsuit, Apple doesn’t replace devices as promised under warranty terms. The plaintiffs.”
