

Blockchain for Big Law Grabs Gates Industrial General Counsel

“Integra Inc., a Denver-based company that provides enterprise blockchain services to law firms and their clients, has hired Jamey Seely to serve as its new president and general counsel,” reports Brian Baxter in Bloomberg Law’s Corporate Governance.

“The addition of Seely, a former corporate partner at Thompson & Knight, had not been announced publicly. She will join Integra in April.”

“Seely has spent nearly the past three years as general counsel at Gates Industrial Corp. plc, a Denver-based transmission belt and industrial equipment manufacturer. Shortly after her late 2017 start at the company, which at the time was controlled by private equity firm The Blackstone Group LP, Seely helped with Gates’ initial public offering that raised nearly $732 million in January 2018.”
