

Brad Hildebrandt is 'Bullish ... Conservatively Bullish' on Law Firms

Legal profession guru Brad Hildebrandt, CEO at Hildebrandt Consulting, says law firm associates shouldn't be overly worried by their firms' lackluster revenue growth in 2016, even though revenue growth could stay modest in 2017.

Hildebrandt shared his thoughts with Bloomberg Law following the release of a report from in Citi Private Bank Law Firm Group and Hildebrandt Consulting, which analyzed a Citi survey of about 200 U.S. law firms about their revenue growth and demand this year.

"With capital markets starting to pick up, and a change in the presidential administration, 'depending how it all sets up,' there could be a flood of initial public offerings and transactions that spur an increase in demand for law firms' services," writes Bloomberg's Gabe Friedman.
