

Bradley Adds Senior Attorney Aaron Chaloner to Intellectual Property Practice

Bradley Arant Boult Cummings LLP is pleased to announce that Aaron Chaloner has joined the firm's Nashville office as a senior attorney in the Intellectual Property Practice Group.

"Aaron's technical background in neuroscience gives him a unique lens into the intersection of legal and scientific issues, allowing him to provide an exceptionally high level of service to clients in the biotechnology industry, while also expanding the depth of the capabilities our team offers," said Bradley Nashville Office Managing Partner Lauren Jacques.

Dr. Chaloner focuses his practice on patent prosecution in the life science and biotechnology industry. He is experienced in all stages of intellectual property prosecution and provides strategic counsel to his clients regarding copyright, trademark, patent and trade secret concerns. Dr. Chaloner completed his Ph.D. in Neuroscience at the University of Oklahoma Health Sciences Center, where he studied technical skills including physiology, neuroscience, epigenetics, neuroendocrine signaling, behavioral sciences, whole animal studies and surgical procedures, and biochemistry.

A graduate of the Oklahoma City University School of Law, Dr. Chaloner earned his undergraduate degree from Baylor University. He is a frequent author on scientific intellectual property issues and has presented his research at national and international scientific meetings.

Bradley's Intellectual Property Practice Group demonstrates the skills and tenacity needed to protect and defend the valuable IP rights of clients. With more than 20 licensed patent attorneys, the firm's national practice offers a full range of services to protect and enforce the intellectual property rights of businesses across a variety of industries.
