

Bradley Attorneys Appointed to ABA Section of Litigation Leadership Positions

Bradley Arant Boult Cummings LLP is pleased to announce that six of the firm's attorneys have been appointed to new leadership roles with the American Bar Association (ABA) Section of Litigation for the 2020-2021 bar year, beginning Aug. 1.

The firm's attorneys newly appointed as ABA Section of Litigation leaders are Dylan C. Black, Tiffany J. deGruy, Tiffany Graves, Robert Emmett Poundstone IV, Anne Marie Seibel, and Ethan T. Tidmore.

A partner in the firm's Birmingham office, Black will serve on the planning committee for the Litigation Section's 2021 Annual Conference in Houston. A member of Bradley's Class Action and Complex Litigation Practice Group, he focuses his practice on complex civil litigation in state and federal courts, with particular emphasis on class actions, state and federal securities fraud cases, professional liability matters, and insurance coverage litigation.

A partner in the firm's Birmingham office, deGruy will serve as co-chair of the Woman Advocate Committee. She focuses her practice on trying high-stakes business litigation.

Based in the firm's Jackson, Mississippi, office, Graves will serve as co-chair of the Pro Bono Committee. Graves is Bradley's pro bono counsel and oversees the development and administration of the firm's pro bono programs.

Managing partner of the firm's Montgomery, Alabama, office, Poundstone will serve on the Access to Justice Committee. He frequently represents clients in litigation matters pending in federal and state trial and appellate courts.

A partner in the firm's Birmingham office, Seibel has just completed her service as one of the section's managing directors and has been elected to serve on the Section of Litigation's Council. She focuses her practice on multi-forum or multi-plaintiff high-stakes litigation and has trial experience in a variety of venues, as diverse as New Hampshire and Alabama trial courts and multiple arbitration proceedings.

A partner in the firm's Birmingham office, Tidmore will serve as co-chair of the Pretrial Practice & Discovery Committee. He concentrates his practice primarily on complex commercial litigation.
