

Breaking Up with Biglaw

“I used to look out at the Hudson from the window of my beautiful office at a Biglaw firm in Manhattan and pinch myself, not believing that I had made it. As a young associate, I had a passion for making connections and building relationships. I quickly realized that such skills would set me up for success,” reports Jill Woods in Above The Law.

“I was newly married and had just bought a house in the suburbs without any kids. Before I took the job, my husband and I had a serious conversation, where we candidly discussed what our future would look like if I took this job and if we started a family. I would be over an hour away from our kids, and my husband would be the one.”

Read the article.