Brendan Fitzgerald Appointed Co-Chair of Littler’s Labor Practice Group

COLUMBUS, Ohio – Littler has appointed Brendan Fitzgerald as co-chair of its Labor Practice Group, the firm announced on January 23. Fitzgerald, a shareholder based in Littler’s Columbus office, joins current co-chairs Jonathan Levine and Brooke Niedecken, succeeding Tanja Thompson.

Fitzgerald advises employers on a wide range of labor-management issues, including National Labor Relations Board proceedings, labor arbitrations, and collective bargaining. He also counsels multinational corporations on strategies to address global labor campaigns.

With over 250 attorneys, Littler’s labor practice supports clients across industries, including nearly half of the Fortune 100. It is involved in union negotiations and high-profile labor litigation.

Fitzgerald, who earned his law degree from Ohio State University, contributes regularly to discussions on labor trends and was a lead contributor to Littler’s 2025 Labor Survey Report.

Thompson will continue her leadership role as managing shareholder of Littler’s Memphis office.
