Buchalter Adds White Collar Attorney Michael Kilgarriff in Denver

DENVER – Buchalter has brought on experienced attorney Michael "Mike" Kilgarriff as a shareholder in its White Collar & Investigations group. Based in Denver, Kilgarriff will also serve as co-chair of the firm's State Attorneys General practice.

Kilgarriff advises clients in highly regulated industries, including financial services, fintech, and cryptocurrency. He assists companies in handling government investigations, responding to subpoenas, and defending against legal actions from state and federal authorities.

He has worked with nearly every state attorney general in the U.S., except those in Wyoming. He has played a key role in significant multistate enforcement actions, including one involving 39 states. His background also includes negotiating resolutions and representing companies in complex regulatory disputes.

"I'm excited to help lead the State AG group and grow the firm's white collar defense work," Kilgarriff said. "Buchalter's strong team and commitment to high-quality client service make this a great fit."

Firm leadership welcomed the move, noting Kilgarriff's practical experience and national reputation as a strong asset. "His knowledge in this space enhances our capabilities both in Colorado and across the country," said Robert Hinckley, who leads the firm's Denver office.

Related Articles

1. Buchalter’s expansion and relocation of its Denver office with the vision of the firm’s continue growth.
2. Buchalter continues its expansion with the addition of Cara Thornton in the firm as a Shareholder in the Denver office.