

Building a 2022 Cowboys Roster Using Only Current Contracts

“Before we get into the thick of free agency and draft talk over the next few months, one of my favorite exercises is seeing what the roster looks like using only currently contracted players for the upcoming season. If the Dallas Cowboys had to go into a game without the benefit of the 2022 offseason,” reports Jess Haynie in Inside The Star.

“This exercise really helps to illustrate where the front office may focus its energy in the coming months. Who are the key veterans that Dallas will be looking to build around? Will departing free agents leave gaping holes on the roster or open the path for younger prospects to step into larger roles? In some spots, like linebacker this year, there may.”

Read the article.