

Charles Barber Named Vice President and General Counsel

“Charles Barber has been appointed George Washington University’s permanent vice president and general counsel, President Mark S. Wrighton announced Friday. A higher education legal expert with decades of experience at major research universities, Barber has served GW’s Office of the General Counsel since,” reports GW Today in their blog.

“Charles has been a crucial member of my leadership team since I joined the university, offering sound judgment and guidance through a wide range of legal matters, from business operations and strategic partnerships to our response to the Wrighton wrote in his message to the GW community. Charles’ legal acumen, collaborative.”
