

Cincinnati's Second-Largest Law Firm Opening D.C. Office

"Frost Brown Todd (FBT) is formally consolidating its federal public policy and regulatory practices into a Washington D.C. office. The Mid-American firm now has 15 offices across nine states and Washington D.C. In addition to recruiting new members, a roster of nearly a dozen well-networked and experienced attorneys who represent their client's needs in their home markets, including Ohio, Indiana, West Virginia, and Kentucky and on the federal level, will support the office. It will operate virtually due to the pandemic and move into a permanent address later when quarantines are lifted," released Frost Brown Todd in their Press Releases.

"FBT's bi-partisan government service counsel has held high-ranking government positions at the national, state, or local levels. Others have served in an advisory capacity to prominent lawmakers, cabinet members, and federal commissions, and advocated for clients before federal regulatory authorities."
