Complimentary Highlights: NACD Public Company Governance Survey

The National Association of Corporate Directors (NACD) recently released the 2015-2016 NACD Public Company Governance Survey, which compiles benchmarking data on governance trends and practices from more than 1,000 public company governance corporate directors and governance professionals. A few of the key findings from this year's survey include:

- Almost half of boards are unprepared to respond to activist investors.
- M&A is now a leading board priority.
- Executive compensation is changing in response to shareholder pressure.

Full results of the survey are available exclusively to NACD members, but you are invited to download a complimentary copy of the highlights from this year's report as a sample of the valuable insights NACD provides to its members, the association says.
