

White Paper: Dealing with Contract Disputes

When you first enter a business deal, no one ever expects things to go poorly, writes Joe Covelli of Covelli Law Offices in Pittsburgh.

But many of these types of situations often go awry, and contract disputes are becoming a more common concern for businesses throughout the country.

“While each party enters a contract agreement after carefully reviewing a contract and determining its pros and cons, no contract is perfect,” he writes. “Some business deals even require the intervention of an experienced contract attorney to help guide the proceedings.”

The article discusses potential issues, performance under a contract, and the litigation process.

Read the article.