

COVID Impact as a Standalone Indemnity in M&A Transactions

“The COVID virus has ushered in unprecedented and challenging times for our country and the global community. From the deeply personal pain and suffering caused by the virus as a health pandemic to behavioral adjustments in the consumer population at large, to every day, but very real, burdens created by business closures and shelter in place orders, the full force and impact of the virus on our society won’t be known for a long time. Apart from these personal and social consequences, of course, the economic downturn is very real and upon us,” discuss Daniel R. Avery and Martin D. Edel in Goulston & Storrs’ What’s Market Blog.

“And yet businesses move forward, even in a very different and challenging environment. Certainly, the COVID virus is impacting the way M&A transactions are being looked at, papered, and implemented.”
