

Covington's Policy Team Adds Ex-Senate Judiciary General Counsel

"A former chief counsel to U.S. Senator Dianne Feinstein on the Senate Judiciary Committee has joined Covington & Burling as a special counsel, marking his first stint in private practice and positioning him to work on technology matters, antitrust issues and other policy areas for U.S. corporate clients," reports Mike Scarcella in Reuters.

"Nicholas Xenakis will be a member of Covington's public policy team in Washington, D.C., the firm said Tuesday. Xenakis has served as chief counsel and staff director for Feinstein, a California Democrat, since January. Earlier, he was general counsel to the judiciary committee under Feinstein's leadership as the ranking Democrat."
