

Davis Wright Tremaine Continues California Healthcare Expansion with Regulatory Attorney Kathryn Edgerton

Kathryn Edgerton, who advises addiction treatment and telemedicine providers, has joined Davis Wright Tremaine's Los Angeles office as counsel. She rejoins her colleagues Stacie Neroni, Hope Levy-Biehl and Christine Johnson, who moved to DWT in early 2020. The four are part of a rising generation of California lawyers elevating the firm's highly regarded healthcare team.

The Healthcare practice, which has depth up and down the West Coast and in Washington, D.C., serves clients across the country, including hospitals and health systems, medical groups, labs, pharmacies, behavioral health providers, telemedicine providers and investors in all those segments.

Edgerton, an Executive Committee member of the Privacy and Security Section of the Los Angeles County Bar Association, was named to a list of "Ones to Watch" in Healthcare for 2021 by Best Lawyers. She received her law degree from Cornell University and her undergraduate degree from the University of Southern California.
