

DAVIS WRIGHT TREMAINE CONTINUES TO DEEPEN ITS ANTITRUST BENCH, ADDING SENIOR LITIGATOR WITH FTC AND INTERNATIONAL BACKGROUND

Davis Wright Tremaine LLP has expanded its national antitrust practice with the addition of former Federal Trade Commission attorney Kaj Rozga as counsel in its New York office. A seasoned antitrust litigator, Rozga has extensive experience in both government and private practice.

Rozga has reunited with DWT partners and former FTC attorneys Litvack and Christopher Renner, adding more depth and complementary expertise to the firm's antitrust capabilities. Rozga brings more than a decade of significant experience handling U.S. antitrust matters, international cross-border transactions, and international cartel investigations and follow-on damages suits.

Rozga joins DWT from bpv Hügel in Vienna, Austria, where he represented international clients in various European competition law matters, including mergers and acquisitions, dispute resolution, and tech counseling. Previously, he practiced at Weil, Gotshal & Manges LLP, where he managed complex civil litigation, defended companies and individuals in criminal cartel matters, and provided M&A and other antitrust counseling. He began his career at the FTC's Bureau of Competition, where he was an integral member of trial teams that successfully challenged two hospital mergers in federal courts and the FTC administrative court, and was awarded for meritorious service and excellence in litigation for his contributions to those cases.

Rozga received his undergraduate degrees in Political Science and Economics from the University of California, San Diego and his law degree from Boston University School of Law. He is the founder of Tech Law Decoded, which tracks major worldwide developments in tech laws and regulations.
