

DOJ's First Criminal Wage-Fixing Case Ends Mostly in Defeat (3)

"A jury found two defendants in the Justice Department's first criminal wage-fixing case not guilty of violating the Sherman Act while finding one defendant guilty on a single count of obstruction of Federal Trade Commission proceedings," reports Ben Penn in the Bloomberg Law.

"Neeraj Jindal, the owner of a physical therapy staffing company, was found guilty Thursday of one of three charges while the jury in the U.S. District Court in the Eastern District of Texas found co-defendant John Rodgers not guilty on all counts. Rodgers was Jindal's clinical director."
