Donald Trump Reportedly Eyeing Ted Cruz for Attorney General

Ted Cruz
Photo by Jamelle Bouie

President-elect Donald Trump is considering former rival Sen. Ted Cruz for U.S. attorney general, according to reports cited by The Washington Times.

Reporter S.A. Miller writes that Trump met Tuesday with the U.S. Senator from Texas. Cruz's name has also mentioned as a possible nominee for the U.S. Supreme Court.

"Mr. Cruz did not confirm speculation about a possible job offer when he emerged from the elevator in the lobby of Trump Tower in New York, where Mr. Trump lives and the transition team offices are located," the newspaper reports.

Read The Washington Times article.