The New Federal Rules with Tom Allman

Tom Allman, Adjunct Professor of Law at the University of Cincinnati

DTI presents an on-demand webinar featuring Tom Allman, a former general counsel and well-known student of the civil rulemaking process, in a discussion on how the new federal rules expected to go into effect Dec. 1 of this year will impact e-discovery obligations and strategy.

Tom Allman chaired both the Sedona Conference and the Rules Committee of Lawyers for Civil Justice. He participated in the Duke Conference Panel and has followed the rulemaking process resulting in the current rules. Currently, he serves as an Adjunct Professor of Law at the University of Cincinnati and speaks and writes extensively on the topic. His paper on the rules amendments is regarded as a classic source on the topic.

The other presenter, Samantha Green, serves as e-discovery counsel for DTI and has more than a dozen years of litigation and consulting experience. At DTI, she serves as a subject matter expert on all aspects of eDiscovery and advises clients on strategy. Prior to joining DTI, she was the eDiscovery attorney in Blank Rome’s New York City office. Prior to that, she worked on a variety of complex litigation matters and conducted in-house CLEs and training programs on eDiscovery topics for Moses & Singer’s New York office, after having been an attorney with Proskauer Rose.
