E-Discovery Provider eTERA Consulting Adds Two New Strategic Hires to Corporate Team

eTERA Consulting, an internationally recognized and award-winning leader in data and technology management, announces the addition of two new full-time team members in support of the company's growing list of clients and employees.

Joining the eTERA team are Kristin Thomas, Human Resources Generalist and Cassey Elder, Manager of Public Relations, the company said in a release.

As the Human Resources Generalist, Thomas is responsible for the onboarding process for new hires. Specifically, she will implement and oversee new hire orientation, compliance training, employee engagement, and ensuring legal compliance, among other human resource functions. In her previous position, Thomas worked as the Human Resources Generalist at a government contractor in Northern Virginia. Bringing more than three years of experience in the human resource space, Thomas plans to make current eTERA procedures more efficient through the use of new programs and practices.

In her new role as the Manager of Public Relations, Elder will focus efforts on five main areas including company conference participation, training and education, press/awards, lead nurturing, and general content creation. Supporting the ongoing initiatives of the eTERA marketing department, Elder will play a key role in amplifying the awareness of the eTERA brand by fostering and managing relationships with key industry partners. Previously, Elder worked as an Account Executive at a public relations firm in Rockville, Maryland.

“As eTERA continues to expand its business and workforce, the need for a dedicated HR professional and PR expert became increasingly apparent,” said eTERA President Scott Holec. “Kristin and Cassey’s respective expertise, commitment to excellence, and enthusiastic attitudes make them both ideal additions to our growing team.”
