

Elite Biglaw Firm Raises Salaries For (Some) Associates After Raking In Big Bucks In 2020

“Biglaw has done well – really, really well – in spite of the ongoing pandemic. In fact, the largest law firms in America have done so well that some associates have started to wonder whether salary increases could be in their futures. The last time this happened was in 2018, when the majority of Biglaw firms increased their base pay for associates to $190K,” writes Staci Zaretsky in Above the Law’s Biglaw.

“Today, it looks like raises are on the horizon for associates working for at least one firm, but will others follow in this firm’s footsteps?”
