

Energy Department to Announce Clean Energy Corps, Hire 1,000 Staffers to Work on Climate Change

“The Energy Department is creating a Clean Energy Corps and launching a hiring portal to attract 1,000 additional workers focused on climate change and clean energy, The Climate 202 has scooped. People who join the Clean Energy Corps will pursue projects aimed at accelerating the,” reports Maxine Joselow in The Washington Post.

“Deployment of clean energy and cutting planet-warming emissions. For example, participants will jump-start an initiative to build thousands of miles of electric transmission lines to carry wind and solar power to communities nationwide. It’s truly a remarkable time to be at the Department of Energy as we set off to implement the historic,”

Read the article.