

Eureka Lawyer Accused of Drug Trafficking Claims 'Something Fishy' About Case

"A Eureka lawyer accused of trafficking drugs and maintaining a drug house says he "was entirely framed" as a result of the clients he represents and at least one of the charges against him isn't legally sufficient," reports Sonia Waraich in Times Standard.

"Acosta is being charged with three felonies – maintaining a drug house, selling illegal drugs and selling prescription drugs – and entered a demurrer at his arraignment Thursday contesting the validity of the first charge."

"The hearing was continued to Friday to allow the prosecution to look into whether the proper procedure was being followed."
