

Everlaw and DSi Partner Announce Ediscovery Partnership

Legal technology company Everlaw Inc. and legal services company DSi has announced a partnership to deliver full-service ediscovery.

In a release, Everlaw says the new offering provides clients with access to Everlaw's advanced litigation software in conjunction with DSi's expertise in consulting, collection, data processing, TAR 2.0 initiatives, project management, and workflow.

The release continues:

The integrated offering leverages the companies' respective strengths:

- DSi is a litigation support services company that provides advanced ediscovery and digital forensics services. DSi's highly trained staff helps law firms and corporations harness today's most forward technology to gain a competitive advantage.
- Everlaw is a technology company that builds the software law firms and corporations use to gain that advantage. Everlaw's eponymous litigation platform makes powerful capabilities easy to use – from search and assignments to TAR and case analytics.

The close alliance is a natural fit because of the similarities in the two providers' priorities. Both companies strive to understand and prioritize user needs. This is manifest in Everlaw's obsession with user experience and in DSi's focus on the people in the ediscovery process. Both companies also saw significant growth in 2015.

“This partnership puts Everlaw’s technology into the hands of ediscovery experts who share our dedication to delivering an unparalleled user experience coupled with the most advanced technology,” said Everlaw CEO AJ Shankar. “We feel extremely fortunate to call DSi our premier partner in North America.”

“Everlaw is a great fit for DSi culturally – and we believe their commitment to providing the highest technological advances will vault them to be one of the leaders in the ediscovery space,” said DSi President John Burchfield.
