

Express Mobile Asserts Patent Infringement Suits Against Nine Leading Technology Firms

“Express Mobile, Inc. (XMO), a pioneering leader in Web 2.0 and mobile technology, announced that today it has filed nine lawsuits against some of the biggest names in e-commerce and technology for patent infringement. The defendants include Atlassian, DropBox, eBay, Expedia, FaceBook, Google, HubSpot, Microsoft, and Squarespace,” reports Express Mobile Inc.

“XMO’s Chair and founder Steven H. Rempell first developed the patents at issue in the late 1990s.”

“Mr. Rempell’s foundational patents are fundamental to modern solutions architecture and design, particularly for Web 2.0 applications such as mobile and desktop website generation, social media and e-commerce websites, among other industries.”
