

Farmers Urge Grain Companies to Co-Operate on Contracts

“The Western Canadian Wheat Growers Association is encouraging farmers and grain companies to work together to find co-operative solutions in cases where producers don’t have enough grain to fill production contracts. WCWGA president Gunter Jochum, who farms west of Winnipeg, said his,” reports Brian Cross in Glacier Farm Media.

“Grain buyers in his area have been reasonable and have shown some flexibility in cases where the amount of grain harvested by farmers has fallen short of contracted grain volumes. Jochum urged growers to talk with their grain companies, be up front and see if a deal can be reached. What we’re saying to farmers is you need to talk to your.”

Read the article.