

Fears Nachawati Co-Founders Recognized as Texas Trailblazers

Bryan Fears, Majed Nachawati honored among 'agents of change'

DALLAS – Bryan Fears and Majed Nachawati, co-founders of Fears Nachawati Law Firm, are among the attorneys heralded as “agents of change” by Texas Lawyer magazine in its 2020 listing of “Texas Trailblazers.”

The pair were selected for their leadership in transforming the North Texas law firm they co-founded in 2006 into one of the top products liability plaintiffs' firms in the nation. The firm remains focused on high stakes litigation that includes representation of state and public entities on a contingency basis, pharmaceutical and medical device litigation, business-interruption insurance disputes, as well as catastrophic injury and death litigation.

That focus has afforded the firm the ability to pursue causes they believe in. For example, under Mr. Fears' guidance, the firm has been among the first in the nation to develop a focus on groundwater “forever chemical” contamination by companies such as 3M and DuPont, fighting for safe drinking water for the future generations.

That dedication to justice extends well past the walls of the firm. Mr. Nachawati is a member of The Dallas Bar Association's Legal Ethics and Lawyer Referral Service Committees and is a member of the Board of Directors of Public Justice. He previously served as the District Chairman for the Grievance Committee for the State Bar of Texas, District 6.

The full list of 2020 Texas Trailblazers can be found in Texas Lawyer magazine's October/November issue.