

Florida Lawyer Wears Full Hazmat Suit to Court Amid COVID-19 Crisis

"Miami lawyer Samuel J. Rabin Jr. decided not to take any chances when he went to the federal courthouse recently for his client's sentencing hearing amid the novel coronavirus crisis," reports Debra Cassens Weiss in ABA Journal's News.

"Rabin wore a full, disposable hazmat suit that he obtained from a contact who sells medical supplies, the Daily Business Review reports."

"Rabin had the option of appearing by Zoom after the judge denied a continuance for his client. But Rabin told the Daily Business Review that he thought it was important to be there in person for his client."
