

Former BigLaw Office Manager Accused of Using Firm's Credit Card for Spending Spree

"Federal prosecutors allege that a former Morrison & Foerster office operations manager spent more than $400,000 on the firm's credit card to make personal purchases and transfer money to his PayPal account." reports Debra Cassens Weiss of the ABA Journal.

"The former employee, Andrew Robertson, faces a preliminary hearing at the end of the month in Washington, D.C., on a federal mail fraud charge."

"Robertson is accused of spending money on personal purchases that included designer clothing, jewelry, home furnishings, groceries, his Verizon bill and storage units for his personal items."
