

Former Biglaw Partner is Suspended After Writing Himself Checks from Firm, Claiming Gambling Addiction

"A former partner at Wilson Elser Moskowitz Edelman & Dicker has been suspended after an ethics panel concluded that he wrote himself checks from the law firm's operating account and then lied about a gambling addiction," reports the ABA Journal.

"Las Vegas lawyer Kym Cushing was suspended for nine months in a Jan. 31 opinion by the Nevada Supreme Court."

"According to findings of fact in the case, Cushing wrote three checks from his law firm's operating account and deposited them into his personal bank account. When the law firm confronted him about the checks, Cushing lied and said he was reimbursing himself for payments made to an expert witness."
