Dallas-Based Litigation Boutique Bailey Brauer Adds Two Lawyers

Dallas-based litigation boutique Bailey Brauer PLLC announces the recent hiring of associate Adam Bell, along with the addition last year of veteran business litigator Gary Powell.

“From the beginning, Bailey Brauer has been dedicated to providing aggressive, creative legal solutions to clients who expect sophisticated representation, and that is not something we will compromise just for the sake of growth,” firm co-founder Alex Brauer says. “We feel confident that Adam and Gary fit that focus in a way that will add tremendous value for our clients.”

In a release, the firm said Powell, who joined Bailey Brauer as of counsel from Locke Lord LLP, represents clients at the federal, state and appellate levels on matters involving contracts, business torts, real estate, fiduciary duty claims, lease disputes, agency contracts, tortious interference, insurance coverage disputes, and deceptive trade practices. His expertise includes franchise, distribution, telecommunications, and uniform commercial code litigation.

Bell represents companies and individuals in complex commercial litigation and government investigations, and also assists clients in regulatory and transactional reviews. He joins Bailey Brauer from Amarillo-based Brown & Fortunato, P.C.

“We are excited to welcome lawyers of this caliber,” said firm co-founder Clayton Bailey. “Both Gary and Adam are exceptional litigators who are also fine trial and appellate attorneys.”