Goetz Schenker Blee & Wiederhorn Adds Steven J. Wiederhorn as Named Partner

Steven Wiederhorn

Insurance defense law firm Goetz Schenker Blee & Wiederhorn LLP announced that it has changed its name, adding Steven J. Wiederhorn as a named senior partner alongside founding partners Marisa Goetz, Robert C. Schenker, and David I. Blee.

In a release, the firm provides legal advice and representation to insurance companies and self-insured corporations across the United States.

The firm said Wiederhorn, co-managing partner of the firm's New Jersey office, has more than 25 years of litigation experience. He is responsible for the account management of several leading insurance carriers across the United States and defends some of the firm's more complex cases in the areas of general negligence, product liability, consumer fraud, catastrophic fires, construction defects, civil rights litigation, employment law and representation of public entities. Wiederhorn also has experience in the area of premises liability, with work conducted on behalf of statewide commercial and residential properties and regional recreational facilities.

Wiederhorn received his J.D. from Washington University School of Law in St. Louis and his Bachelor of Arts from Duke University.