

Hanzo Adds Brad Harris as Vice President of Product

Hanzo announced the appointment of Brad Harris as vice president of product.

In a release, the firm said Harris is responsible for expanding the company's product vision and for developing innovative solutions that address growing data management challenges for corporate legal and compliance departments. These include the preservation, retention, governance, and risk management of modern enterprise collaboration data including Slack.

Harris has more than 30 years of experience in high technology and IT, including the last 15 years in the field of ediscovery. At Zapproved, Harris was responsible for driving the company's growth in the corporate legal segment, advising clients on best practices for data preservation and ediscovery, and managing the company's product development strategy.

Harris has served as chair for such events as the PREX Conference and Cascadia Sessions. Harris is a frequent author and speaker on ediscovery, an active member of several The Sedona Conference working groups, and teaches as an adjunct professor at Lewis & Clark Law School.

Harris is based in Hanzo's Portland, OR office.
