

Katea Ravega Rejoins Quarles & Brady in Indianapolis

Quarles & Brady LLP announced that Katea Ravega has rejoined the firm's Indianapolis office as a partner in its Health & Life Sciences practice group. In addition, she was named the Indianapolis Health & Life Sciences office chair. Ravega was a long-time attorney with the firm before going in-house to work for a Silicon Valley-based app company in the pharmaceutical space.

In a release, the firm said Ravega is a health care lawyer who focuses her practice on technology, innovative business models, regulatory compliance, and contracting. She represents clients involved in the pharmaceutical industry, physicians, and other health care providers.

"We are thrilled to have Katea rejoin our Indianapolis office," said Lucy Dollens, Indianapolis office managing partner. "Her knowledge and experience in the health care technology and pharmacy industry, from both the inhouse counsel and outside counsel perspective, strengthens our efforts to grow the firm's health law practice in our Indianapolis office and provide our clients with the best possible legal service."

Ravega received her law degree from Georgetown University Law Center and is originally from Columbus, Indiana.
