

Lowenstein Sandler's Creates Survey of State Charity Registration Requirements

The Lowenstein Center for the Public Interest has created a Summary Survey of State Charity Registration Requirements in All 50 States and the District of Columbia to help nonprofits comply with state law across the country. This resource gives nonprofits the information they need to understand their legal obligations when they solicit funds from donors throughout the United States, the firm said in a release.

Prepared for Pro Bono Partnership, a center client, the survey provides guidance for nonprofits whose online fundraising brings in money from parts of the country where they do not otherwise have a presence and where they may not be aware of state-specific registration obligations.

Nancy Eberhardt, executive director of pro bono partnership, noted that compliance with charitable registration requirements in the 40-plus states that require registration and reporting "is a daunting task for nonprofits. Lowenstein Sandler's survey provides the nonprofit community a concise guide to compliance."

The survey is available on the Pro Bono Partnership website.
