

Miller & Chevalier Elects New Leadership

Miller & Chevalier Chartered announced that the firm's members elected Kathryn Cameron Atkinson, member and immediate past chair of the International Department, as chair of the firm effective July 1, 2019. Atkinson succeeds Marc J. Gerson, who will continue to lead the firm's federal tax policy practice.

The firm said Atkinson, who has spent her entire 27-year legal career at Miller & Chevalier, focuses her practice on international corporate compliance and investigations with an emphasis on the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act (FCPA), economic sanctions and export controls, and anti-money laundering laws. She has twice been selected as an Independent Compliance Monitor by the Department of Justice and the Securities and Exchange Commission. Atkinson is recognized for her work by various lawyer ranking publications, including Chambers USA and Chambers Global for her FCPA work, Global Investigations Review, which named her one of the top Women in Investigations (2015), and Latinvex, where she is ranked as one of Latin America's Top 100 Female Lawyers for FCPA and Fraud (2017 – 2019).

She has served on the firm's Executive Committee as chair of the International Department since 2012 after several years as vice chair of that department. She has also held positions on the firm's Compensation, Hiring, Lawyer Development, and Pro Bono Committees.

In addition to Atkinson, the firm's Executive Committee includes vice chair Adam P. Feinberg, Tax Department chair Kevin L. Kenworthy, Litigation Department chair Andrew T. Wise, International Department chair James G. Tillen, and at-large members Maria O'Toole Jones and Preston L. Pugh.
