

Corporate Partner Kenneth Baronsky Joins Sidley in Century City

Sidley Austin LLP announced that Kenneth J. Baronsky has joined the firm in Century City as a partner in its Corporate group.

In a release, the firm said Baronsky has experience advising companies, private equity sponsors, executives, owners and board members.

He joins from Milbank, Tweed, Hadley & McCloy LLP, where he served as managing partner of its Los Angeles office and as its corporate practice group leader for more than a decade.

In a release, the firm said Baronsky advises on mergers, acquisitions and dispositions, equity and debt investments, restructurings and other corporate transactions.

“Ken’s arrival reaffirms Sidley’s position in Los Angeles as the destination corporate practice for Wall Street lawyers,” said Dan Clivner, co-leader of the firm’s Private Equity practice and managing partner of the Los Angeles and Century City offices. “Ken is a class act and he brings a breadth of experience that is second-to-none. I’m thrilled he’s joined our growing team here in Greater Los Angeles and around the world, and am eager for our clients to experience the benefits of Ken’s knowledge and experience.”

In addition to Baronsky, Sidley’s Private Equity practice has recently added laterals including Adam Weinstein and Tony Feuerstein, who joined the global Private Equity and M&A practices as partners in New York in October.
