"Our Houston presence will allow us to serve numerous clients across a diverse array of practice areas."

In a release, the firm said:

New shareholder Mark Willingham comes to Segal McCambridge from Willingham, Fultz & Cougill LLP, where he served as the firm's managing partner in Houston. For over 25 years, Willingham, a career-long trial attorney, has focused his practice on commercial and business litigation, mass tort and environmental litigation, personal injury, product liability, and construction law. He has unparalleled experience litigating a wide variety of cases in state and federal court in Texas as well as throughout the country.

"We feel extremely fortunate to be able to bring Mark Willingham on board to lead the firm's new office in Houston." Crane said of Willingham. "His litigation success record, outstanding reputation and strong local ties will be valuable assets to the firm as we expand in Texas."

Willingham has litigated and coordinated intricate multi-state and federal litigation and class-action claims for companies across the country. He has acted as trial counsel, national trial counsel, national coordinating counsel, and outside general counsel in different jurisdictions throughout the nation.

“Over the course of my career, I’ve come to know many of the attorneys at Segal McCambridge and have always been impressed with the tough yet congenial way they litigate their cases and their history of success in the courtroom,” said Willingham. “Joining Segal McCambridge in Houston allows us to share resources with the common goal of further expanding the work we are already doing in Texas and across the country.”

Willingham received his J.D. from South Texas College of Law – Houston, and a BBA in Management and Finance from The University of Texas at Austin.
