Michael B. Pullano New Shareholder at Segal McCambridge

Michael B. Pullano has joined Segal McCambridge Singer and Mahoney, Ltd. as a shareholder in the firm's Philadelphia office.

"Mike has extensive litigation experience, the utmost integrity and the ability to contribute significantly to realizing our shared vision for the firm's continued national growth," said Mark Crane, Segal McCambridge managing shareholder.

Pullano focuses his practice on complex catastrophic injury cases in the products liability realm and in the defense of professional negligence matters. He has represented manufacturers and suppliers of heavy construction equipment, including fuel dispensers, refuse collection vehicles, and Liquified Propane Gas pumps and compressors.

"With Segal McCambridge's nationally recognized reputation defending products cases, I knew joining the firm would allow me to better serve my clients who have a national presence," said Michael Pullano. "Sharing in Segal McCambridge's commitment to client service, joining the firm was the natural next step for me."

In a release, the firm said Pullano has represented architects, engineers, attorneys and municipal professionals, including prosecutors and police officers in professional liability cases. His clients include public and private entities, including Fortune 500 companies, as well as individuals. He also has experience defending employment claims, and in defamation and civil rights matters.

Pullano previously was with Weber Gallagher in Philadelphia. Prior to his work in civil litigation, he worked as an assistant district attorney in Philadelphia. He received his J.D. from Illinois Institute of Technology, Chicago-Kent College of Law and his B.A. from Catholic University in Washington, D.C.