

Sidley Adds Investment Fund Partner Mateja Maher in London

Sidley Austin LLP announced that Mateja Maher has joined the firm as a partner in its Investment Funds practice and is based in Sidley's London office.

Maher joins from Campbell Lutyens, a private capital adviser focused on fund placement and secondary advisory services, where he has served as general counsel since 2017. Previously, he was a partner in the private funds group at Kirkland & Ellis International LLP.

The firm said Maher has in-house experience in the private funds community, working in the private fundraising and secondary market, including buyout, venture capital, infrastructure, debt and real estate. During his career, he has acted on a number of landmark fundraising and secondary transactions ranging from tens of millions to several billion U.S. dollars in size, the firm said.
