Akin Gump Event Examines Future of Renewable Energy Market

Akin Gump recently hosted the webinar "30 Days Postelection, Reading the Tea Leaves on the U.S. Renewables Market," looking at the future of renewable energy under the incoming Trump administration. Audio of that webinar now is available om the firm's website.

Panelists included members of the firm's global projects and finance and public law and policy practices:

- Former U.S. Senator John Sununu (R-NH), adjunct senior policy advisor, public law and policy
- John Marciano, partner, renewable energy tax
- Jeff McMillen, partner, public law and policy
- Ed Pagano, partner, public law and policy
- Brian Pomper, partner, public law and policy
- Ed Zaelke, partner, renewable energy & chair, global project finance practice

"The speakers addressed several topics of interest to U.S. and European private equity funds invested in renewable energy as well as renewable energy investors, developers, tax equity investors and lenders," the firm says on its website. "The panel discussed how issues such as tax credits, trade policy and environmental concerns might be addressed during a Trump administration."

Listen to the webinar audio on-demand.

Join Our LinkedIn Group