Changing Contracts: Amending Agreements

Amending agreements is a common practice with managed service providers (MSPs) and companies involved with software licensing and companies that provide professional services, according to a blog post on the website of Kirkpatrick Law.

Even the best agreements can require amendments based on changes in law, technology, and the products or services provided.

The post discusses some examples of ways to amend contracts, including delete and replace, from and to, and a revised agreement.

Read the article.