

Data Safeguards in Services Agreements

A post on the website of Morgan, Lewis & Bockius takes a look at some of the issues involving the latest contracting trends for services agreements.

“At the outset of the contracting process, it is important for the deal team and the key stakeholders to evaluate and properly define the types of data that the service provider will access or process as part of the services,” advise the authors, Edward J. Hansen and Christopher C. Archer.

The assessment should consider the scope and types of data, and define company data and personal data.

Read the article.