

Is Your Service Contract Protecting Your Company? 9 Essential Clauses that Limit Fallout Damage

Gabriela Smith, writing for Nearshore Americas, discusses several key standard clauses that should be included to make a contract strong and reliable.

“As lawyers, we constantly encounter less than ideal scenarios day in and day out when parties – for whatever their reasons – fail to sign a good contract, or even sign a contract at all,” she writes. “However, having a good service contract that is tailored to the particular situation can be one of the best decisions that a company can make.”

She discusses recitals, payment terms and timing, commissions, law and venue, work product, confidential information, termination, assignment, and modification and amendment.

Read the article.